Step 1: Complete the following ‘mad lib’. Consult with your group to fill in the blanks.

Back in ____________, I took a _________________ ride all the way across the country.
(year) (kind of transportation)

Along the way, I sat next to one of the ____________, ____________ people I’d ever met.
(adjective) (adjective)

Turns out, the name of the person was _________________________ and the (first and last name)

person had just written a book all about _________________ and how that relates to (kind of animal)

_________________________________ book sounded so interesting to me, because at the time, (kind of food)

I had just learned about ___________________________________________.
(a book discussed in this class)

The book had a _________________ name; it reminded me of______________________ (adj adjective) (a kind of dance step or move)

and it was was called _____________________________________________.
(title of book)

_____________________________________ had just had the book published by this small, funky (first and last name from before) press called ______________________ out of _______________________, that specialized in (name of a press) (city)

titles about ________________________ (noun)

Step 2: Write a bibliography citation for the book

Now, using the terms your group just came up with, put together a citation, conforming as closely as possible to a style guide: